INTRODUCTION.

A FULL knowledge of the commercial productions of the different countries contributing to the great Exhibition is essential to the carrying out the views of the originators of the grand design, of giving to such countries the benefits of a mutual interchange of the latest results of improvements in the manufactures, and an insight of the processes and materials used in such manufactures, and it is highly necessary that the Catalogues of the articles exhibited should be as explicit as possible, and with remarks on the localities of production, and of the facilities by which a means of Exchange of produce and of the manufactured articles may take place between the commercial ports of distant countries. Turkey has for some years been considered as a non-industrial country, and as depending on foreign states, chiefly England, for the supplies of her annual large consumption of textile and other useful fabrics; but although naturally an agricultural country, his Majesty the Sultan is, with the most praiseworthy intentions, endeavouring to revive the old manufactures which once existed, and by the introduction of new working establishments on a large scale, and at his own private cost, for the manufacture of broadcloth, silk, cotton, glass, and metal goods, is giving a fresh impetus to the industry of his country, which requires time alone to prove the soundness of the policy pursued, and shows that under his enlightened views the ancient narrow prejudices of his predecessors are fast fading, as "things that have been," and Turkey, with her immense resources of the raw materials within her own territories, may ere long rely on the result of her home manufactures for much of her now required foreign supplies. Nothing so much conduces to the progress and prosperity of a country as the certain knowledge of the condition, prospects, and influences of the commercial policy of other countries with whom that country may be in relation; and Turkey has provided one of the surest means for this end, in sending into England, France, and Germany, many young men, who partly finish their education in these respective countries, and who thus become fitted to acquire a knowledge of the views of men of more practical and diverse opinions than themselves, on subjects of importance in manufacturing, political, and social matters; and the knowledge thus obtained is no more lost to these young men than the arts of ship-building, civil engineering, &c., which are in fact the ostensible objects of their visiting foreign countries.

Amongst the contributions received from Constantinople will be found specimens of broad-cloth equal to some of our west of England manufacture, but this has been produced at a cost which precludes all ideas of competition with other countries on the important feature of cheap production; and the same observation will apply to their cotton fabrics, and silk piece goods, in imitation of French stuffs, all of which can be manufactured in abundance, but at too great an expense at present to meet the means of the people at large. The improvement, however, in the article of raw silks may be mentioned especially, to prove that where encouragement is given to the energies of the people, in the way of remuneration for their skill, the result is manifest. Not fifteen years since, the silk imported into England was of low quality, badly reeled, hastily and dishonestly packed, and averaged in value about 9s. per lb., whilst within the last few years a new feature in the trade has been introduced, by the adoption of the improved French and Italian method of reeling, by several of the most influential firms, among which may be mentioned the names of Messrs. Bilezekdjie, Gezairli, Mourgue, Kantaroglou, Scott, Taylor, Paulaki, and Ussep Bey Oglou; and the merits of the Broosa raw silk are now found to be equal to any silks brought to this market, and the consignments realize for fine ordinary qualities 14s. to 16s. 6d. per lb., whilst some of the finest have been sold within the last few months as high as 27s. per lb.

Should the manufacturers still be encouraged by a liberal policy on the part of the Turkish government, there is every hope that Turkey may become a self-supplying country to a large extent of the useful manufactures required. In embroidery and articles of gorgeous work, common in Oriental states, Turkey has long stood pre-eminent; but the period has arrived when a display of barbaric magnificence, although characteristic, is no longer accounted the test of a wealthy power, but the statistics of imports and exports of commodities suited to the wants of the million, are alone taken as the sure indications of the prosperity or weakness of a nation. With regard to the facilities of communication with other countries for commercial purposes, Turkey stands in the position of one of the "most favoured of nations," and her vast population, spread over islands and on a continent margined with ports of safe and easy access to trading vessels, gives her the advantage of the ready supply to her own people of every required necessary from foreign powers, and admits of the greatest facility of exchanging her own natural productions so much required by others, and the value of which will be appreciated by a commercial people, in the list of articles enumerated in the present Catalogue, and which have been classed with as much care in the naming, uses, and localities of production, as the limited time for the publishing of the work would admit.

MESSRS. MOURGUE AND CO.,

AT AIN HAMADE, NEAR BEYROUT.

A French Company established for the Culture of the Mulberry Tree in the French Manner—Filature of Silk by Steam—Culture of the Silk Worm.

Counting Houses at Beyrout, Marseilles, and Lyons.

RESIDENT PARTNER AND DIRECTOR AT BEYROUT, MONS. THOMAS DALGUE MOURGUE, OF GANGES, DEPARTMENT DE L'HERAULT,

Member of the National Agricultural, Manufacturing, and Commercial Academy, Paris.

A Filanda of Silk by steam, of Messrs. Mourgue and Co., at Ain Hamade, near Beyrout, Syria, belonging to a French Company, for introducing Agriculture, Industry, and Commerce in Syria, having offices at Beyrout, Marseilles, and Lyons. The managing partner at Ain Hamade is Thomas Dalgue Mourgue, of Ganges, Department de l'Herault, Member of the National Academy for Agriculture, Manufacture, and Commerce in Paris.

The Establishment of Messrs. Mourgue and Co. at Ain Hamade, in Mount Lebanon, four hours from Beyrout, was founded in 1843, but sent its produce for sale only in 1847. Its magnitude is such that it now employs 212 work people of both sexes and all ages, all Ottoman subjects. They are employed both in the Agricultural and Industrial part of the Establishment.

The operations of this Company have for basis in Syria,—

- 1st. The "Sericiculture," or Culture and Dressing of the Mulberry Tree.
- 2nd. The Breeding of Silkworms.
- 3rd. The Exportation of Cocoons.
- 4th. The Spinning of Silk in the French way.
- 5th. General Trade of Native Silk.
- 6th. And finally, the Working (Mouillinage) of the Silk in France.

The Establishment of Ain Hamade has 20,000 mulberry trees, and is susceptible of being increased. It produces every year 5,000 kilograms (11,000 English pounds) of fine white and yellow silk, in the French style, similar to the samples exhibited, costing one hundred and fifty piastres per oke. There exists in the filanda a double set of reels of English diameter, to execute orders coming from England.

The superior quality of the produce of Messrs. Mourgue and Co.'s establishment has already ensured to the manager a recompence of honour from the National Academy for Agriculture, Manufacture, and Commerce of Paris.
